022 Pa. Code § 14.105. Personnel.

(a) Paraprofessionals.

(1) An instructional paraprofessional is a school employee who works under the direction of a certificated staff member to support and assist in providing instructional programs and services to children with disabilities or eligible young children. The support and assistance includes one-on-one or group review of material taught by certificated staff, classroom management and implementation of positive behavior support plans. Services may be provided in a special education class, regular education class or other instructional setting as provided in the student's IEP. Instructional paraprofessionals shall meet one of the following qualifications effective July 1, 2010:

- (i) Have completed at least 2 years of postsecondary study.
- (ii) Possess an associate degree or higher.
- (iii) Meet a rigorous standard of quality as demonstrated through a State or local assessment.

(2) Nothing in subsection (a) should be construed to supersede the terms of a collective bargaining agreement in effect on July 1, 2008.

(3) Instructional paraprofessionals, each school year, shall provide evidence of 20 hours of staff development activities related to their assignment.

(4) A personal care assistant provides one-to-one support and assistance to a student, including support and assistance in the use of medical equipment (for example, augmentative communication devices; activities of daily living; and monitoring health and behavior). A personal care assistant may provide support to more than one student, but not at the same time. Personal care assistants shall provide evidence of 20 hours of staff development activities related to their assignment each school year. The 20 hours of training may include training required by the school-based access program.

ROLE OF A PARAPROFESSIONAL

- How do paraprofessionals contribute to the school community?

Did you know that paraprofessionals comprise one of the fastest growing positions in public education? Employment projections indicate that the need for skilled paraprofessionals to assist with many instructional and non-instructional tasks in public schools will continue to increase dramatically over the next 10 – 20 years. As the number of skilled paraprofessionals increase, their roles and responsibilities continue to change and evolve, becoming both more specialized and comprehensive. One reason for the increase is that children in classrooms are much more diverse than even 10 years ago. A specific area of increased diversity has resulted from students with disabilities receiving their educational services in general education classrooms. Frequently, paraprofessionals are hired to provide assistance to students with and without disabilities, and to general and special education teachers.

- Who are paraprofessionals?

As you may already know, a variety of job titles are used throughout the country to refer to personnel who function in the role of a “paraprofessional.” Our District uses the title paraprofessional. Titles in other districts include: paraeducator, instructional assistant, teacher’s assistant, individualized learning assistant, pupil support assistant and many more. In this handbook we are using the term “paraprofessional” to refer to school employees,

Whose position is either instructional in nature or who delivers other direct or indirect services to students and/or parents; and who work under the supervision of a teacher or other professional staff member who is responsible for the overall conduct of the class, the design and implementation of individualized educational programs, and the assessment of the effect of the programs on the student progress (Pickett, 1988. P. 2)

The focus of this handbook is for paraprofessionals who work primarily with students with special needs and who may be included in one or more educational teams with certified professionals.

- Providing Curriculum & Instructional Support

The general and special educators have primary responsibility for the design and development of daily instruction for all of the students in the class, including students with disabilities and other unique learning needs. As a paraprofessional, you will have many responsibilities related to supporting the implementation of instruction, as well as classroom management. Because you are a valued and skilled member of the team, frequently you will be asked to provide input, to generate ideas, and to assist in the development of materials and adaptations for students. You might be asked to provide very specific types of support to individual students with disabilities; for example, implementing specific instructional procedures developed by the special educator, or assisting with the physical management and position of students as specified by the occupational or physical therapists. You might also be asked to assist individual or small groups of students to review or practice skills under the direction of certified personnel. Certified personnel include classroom teachers, speech-language pathologists, special educators, adaptive physical education teachers, occupational and physical therapists, administrators, and other specialists.

Although, your primary role and initial focus is to assist individual student(s), you may also be asked to assist with classroom management so that the certified educator can more effectively deliver instruction to small or large groups of students. Other examples of paraprofessional roles are: monitoring students during a test, assisting students understanding of classroom expectations, organizing lunch count and distributing papers. In addition, general or special educators and others may ask that you perform specific tasks. As you notice tasks that would contribute toward the classroom community as a whole, offering your support will be appreciated. Such an offer may seem small, but it can go a long way in establishing your integral membership on the classroom team.

The following table delineates some of the roles and responsibilities for teachers and paraprofessional staff:

CONFIDENTIALITY

Paraprofessionals often have access to confidential information regarding students. A key responsibility of paraprofessionals is to practice responsible and ethical standards regarding confidential information. Paraprofessionals need to be knowledgeable about laws regarding confidential information and practice appropriate behaviors reflecting the law and respecting the privacy of students and families. The list below, from Paraprofessional Connection – Color Me Successful: Ideas to grow by for beginning and experienced paraprofessionals by Sam Mule, outlines some of the issues in a creative and memorable manner.

C – Control information about the students.

O – Only share information with those people who have a need to know and who have proper authorization.

N – Never discuss school information regarding students while attending social events.

F – Forward inquiries regarding students to teacher and supervisory personnel, if you are approached for confidential information.

I – Interact with those who inquire in a manner in keeping with your responsibilities.

D – Don't discuss student situations in the lounge with staff who have no need to know.

E – Explanations for not discussing a student are easier than explanations for inappropriately divulging confidential information.

N – Not sharing is caring.

T – Think about privacy.

I – It's important that things that happen at school, stay at school.

A – Appropriate information exchange carries with it responsibility.

L – Learn how to handle uncomfortable inquiries in positive and courteous, but confidential ways.

I – Identify acceptable ways that the necessary people can access information.

T – Treat confidential information as if your job depended on it – it may.

Y – You are part of positive public relations for schools. Confidentiality is a cornerstone.

MAINTAINING CONFIDENTIALITY

Confidentiality is an import aspect of your job as a paraprofessional. Through your work you will learn information about students and families. Such information is personal and private. It must not be shared beyond the family and the student’s service team. Not only is it potentially disrespectful to do so, it is illegal.

Beyond students with disabilities, the privacy right of all students and families who are associated with our school must be regarded. Following are suggested guidelines for maintaining confidentiality:

- Never discuss information about a student in a public place (e.g., faculty lounge, hallway, grocery store)
- Never discuss information about one student with the parents of another student.
- Never discuss information about one student with another student.
- Never discuss information about a student with school personnel who are not considered a member of that student’s service providing team.
- If you need to access a student’s records or other personal information, go to your supervisor.
- Do not create your own personal files on a student or family.
- Review the confidentiality policies of our school district with your immediate supervisor. If you have questions regarding the policies and procedures of our school regarding confidentiality, speak to your supervisor immediately.

Here are some examples on how you might respond to questions that people ask you about your job.

Possible Question	Possible Response
“Who’s that funny looking kid that flaps his hands all the time?”	“Student information is confidential to everyone but his parents and teachers.”
“I heard you’re working at the school. Is that third-grade teacher as mean as everyone says?”	“I’m an employee at the school now. I can’t talk about my colleagues that way.” OR “Employees aren’t allowed to talk about one another outside of school.”
“What’s the scoop on Gail? I heard her husband.....?”	“Gail’s my fellow employee as well as my friend now; I can’t discuss her private life.”
“What’s wrong with Suzanne?”	“Student information is protected by law. I’d be breaking the law if I spoke about any student outside of school.”
“I heard Jason is doing better with that new special education teacher.”	“Jason’s progress is confidential. It is not okay for me to discuss it.”
“Is Tanya in the special reading class?”	“Placement of students is a confidential matter. We’re not allowed to speak about student placement outside of school.”

CODE OF ETHICS FOR PARAPROFESSIONALS

A code of ethics defines and prescribes acceptable practices. A code for paraprofessionals examines specific responsibilities of the paraprofessional, as well as the relationships that must be maintained with students, parents, teachers, school, and community.

Accepting Responsibilities

- Recognize that the supervising teacher has the ultimate responsibility for student's instruction and management.
- Engage only in activities for which you are qualified or trained.
- Do not communicate progress or concerns about students to parents unless directed to do so by the supervising teacher or administrator.
- Refer concerns expressed by parents, students, or others to the supervising teacher.
- Practice the standards of professional and ethical conduct approved by the school district.
- Perform tasks that are within an identified scope of responsibility for paraprofessionals in different positions.

Relationships with Students and Parents

- Discuss a child's progress, limitations, and/or educational program only with the supervising teacher in the appropriate setting.
- Discuss school problems and confidential matters only with appropriate personnel.
- Refrain from engaging in discriminatory practices based on a student's disability, race, sex, cultural background, or religion.
- Respect the dignity, privacy, and individuality of all students, parents, and staff members.
- Present yourself as a positive adult role model.
- Refer concerns expressed by learners or others to the supervising teacher or other professional practitioner.
- Share appropriate information about a learner's performance, behavior, progress, and/or educational program only with the supervising teacher in the appropriate setting.
- Discuss confidential issues and school problems only with the supervising teacher or designated personnel.
- Follow the guidelines established by the district to protect the health, safety, and well-being of all learners and staff.
- Represent the school district in a positive manner.

Relationship with the Teacher

- Establish communication and a positive relationship with the teacher.
- Recognize and respect the roles of teachers as supervisors and team leaders.
- Recognize and respect the differences in the roles of teachers and paraprofessionals.
- Recognize the teacher's responsibilities for planning learner programs and developing behavior management programs.

- Follow the chain of command established by the district to address policy questions, system issues, and personnel practices.
- When problems cannot be resolved, utilize the school district's grievance procedures.

Relationship with the School

- Accept responsibility for improving skills.
- Know school policies and procedures.
- Represent the school district in a positive manner.
- Participate with administrators and other stakeholders in creating and implementing comprehensive systems of professional development for paraprofessionals.
- Participate in continuing staff development.

PERSONAL CONSIDERATIONS

The following are expected behaviors:

- Be on time! Promptness is essential – students may not be safe while you are “running late”.
- Regular attendance is very important. Students, teachers, and other paraprofessionals depend on you each day.
- Follow building procedures for absences.
- Maintain professional behavior in the classroom at all times. Your job is to support students. Conducting personal business (personal phone calls, reading newspapers, e-mails, or other recreational reading material, etc.) is not acceptable while on duty.
- As a paraprofessional, you are always expected to present a professional appearance and to conduct yourself in a professional manner.
 - ✓ Maintain good personal hygiene. You will be in close proximity with many people.
 - ✓ Alter your dress if it causes a distraction or challenging behaviors for the student(s). (ie., dangling earring that distract the student.)

Also, very important:

- Take concerns directly to the person involved or your immediate supervisor. Avoid “venting” your concerns with co-workers or students in the hallways or lounge.
- Avoid talking about students, other personnel, or other personal matters in front of students.
- Maintain and exhibit respect for families.

ESTABLISHING EFFECTIVE COMMUNICATION

There are many things that need to be communicated with educational team members. Minimally, you will need to communicate about issues related to individual student programs, curriculum planning and adaptations, roles and responsibilities, behavioral and/or health considerations, and scheduling. Communication is the foundation of effective teamwork and occurs both in person and in writing. It may be helpful for you to ask both the special and general educators that you work with how you will fit into the communication loop. Of particular importance will be how to communicate on a regular basis about individual student programming needs. Some teams have a regularly scheduled time to meet each week.

Even with proactive systems of communication in place, you may encounter situations with students that require you to think and act quickly. When these situations arise, make your best decision based on your knowledge of the student and the situation as it presents itself. Frequently, these spontaneous decisions are made related to difficulties with changes in schedules, activities, or student groups. Document these incidents in order to keep the entire educational team informed of the student's instructional and behavioral progress.

COMMUNICATING WITH PARENTS & FAMILIES

Another situation in which you may need to communicate with your supervising teachers is with regard to contact, either written or verbal with family members. Given your close proximity to students, you may sometimes come in direct contact with parents or other family members. Ongoing communication with parents is the responsibility of the IEP case manager and classroom teacher. However, there may be situations in which you are the person to whom parents initially communicate a need or question. Be clear with families that communications regarding student progress, academic content, classroom behaviors, and other educational concerns should be discussed with the classroom teacher. Be sure to inform the teachers about the information discussed.

RESPECTFUL INTERACTIONS TOWARDS STUDENTS

You may develop a close relationship with the student(s) you support on a daily basis. It is important that you consider what interactions are the most respectful to the student(s) and those around him or her. Your body language, tone of voice, facial expressions, choice of words, and age-appropriate language all need to be considered when communicating with the student(s).

CLASSROOM MODIFICATION GUIDELINES

Modifications are a type of adaptation. Adaptations are defined “as any adjustment or modification in the curriculum, instruction, environment, or materials in order to enhance the participation of a member of the classroom community” (Udvari-Solner, 1992, p. 3). Many students, with or without disabilities, benefit from adaptations in order to accomplish tasks more efficiently and to participate fully in classroom activities.

It is not uncommon for paraprofessionals to help in the development of adaptations for individuals and classrooms of students. This is a very important and valued support. When considering how to develop and use modifications:

- Focus on what the student CAN do.
- Use the least obtrusive support first.
- Use age-appropriate materials, goals and activities when planning.
- Maximize active student participation.
- Facilitate positive and valued interactions with peers.
- Promote independent.

A PROCESS FOR CREATING MODIFICATIONS

Based upon the subject and activity occurring in the classroom consider the following questions to assist in creating modifications for a student(s).

1. Can the student do the same activity, in the same way, at the same level as peers?
If not....
2. Can the student do the same activity but with modified expectations?
If not...
3. Can the student do the same activity but with modified expectations and materials?
If not...
4. Can the student do a similar activity but with modified expectations?
If not...
5. Can the student do a similar activity but with modified materials?
If not...
6. Can the student do a different parallel activity?
If not...
7. Can the student do a different activity in a different section of the room?
If not...

STUDENT CHARACTERISTICS CHECKLIST

Use the following checklist to help you find out what you need to know about the learning needs and characteristics of the students with whom you work. For each student you work with, consider:

- The characteristics of the student (communication needs, visual impairments, preferences, etc.)
- General class room adaptations
- Adaptations to the physical environment
- Adaptations to instructional materials (what types of materials you give the student)
- Adaptations to instructional procedures and testing (how you deliver instruction)
- Behavioral interventions (formal or informal plans in place)
- Medical concerns (medications, medical conditions, special procedures)

IT'S THE "PERSON FIRST" – THEN THE DISABILITY

➤ What do you see first?	Say...	Instead of...
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The wheelchair? • The physical problem? • The person? If you saw a person in a wheelchair unable to get up the stairs into a building, would you say “there is a handicapped person unable to find a ramp?” Or would you say “there is a person with a disability who is handicapped by an inaccessible building?” What is the proper way to speak to our about someone who has a disability? Consider how you would introduce someone – Jane Doe – who doesn’t have a disability. You would give her name, where she lives, what she does or what she is interested in – she likes swimming, playing cards, or watching Robert Redford movies. Why say it differently for a person with disabilities? Every person is made up of many characteristics – mental, as well as physical – and few want to be identified only by their ability to play tennis, or by their love for fried onions, or by the mole that’s on their face. Those are just parts of us. In speaking or writing, remember that children or adults with disabilities are like everyone else – except they happen to have a disability. Therefore, here are a few tips for improving your language related to disabilities and handicaps. <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Speak of the person first, then the disability. 2. Emphasize abilities, not limitations. 3. Do not label people as part of a disability group – don’t say “the disabled”, say “people with disabilities.” 4. Don’t give excessive praise or attention to a person with a disability; don’t patronize them. 5. Choice and independence are important; let the person do or speak for him/himself as much as possible; if addressing an adult, say “Bill” instead of “Billy.” 6. A disability is a functional limitation that interferes with a person’s ability to walk, hear, talk, learn, etc.; use handicap to describe a situation or barrier imposed by society, the environment or oneself. 	Child with a disability Person with cerebral palsy Person who is deaf or hard of hearing Person with cognitive limitations Person with epilepsy or person with seizure disorder Person who has... Without speech, nonverbal Developmental delay Emotional disorder, or mental illness Uses a wheelchair With Down Syndrome Has a learning disability Non-disabled Has a physical disability Congenital disability Condition Seizures Cleft lip Mobility impaired Medically involved, or has chronic illness Paralyzed Has hemiplegia (paralysis of one side of the body) Has quadriplegia (paralysis of both arms and legs) Of short stature Accessible parking	Disabled or handicapped child Palsied, or C.P., or spastic Deaf and dumb Retarded Epileptic Afflicted, suffers from, victim Mute or dumb Slow Crazy or insane Confined to a wheelchair Mongoloid Is learning disabled Normal, healthy Crippled Birth defect Disease (unless it is a disease) Fit Hare lip Lame Sickly Invalid or paralytic Hemiplegic Quadriplegic Dwarf or midget Handicapped parking
